of "For Her Sake" The Ro CHAPTER IL MAJ. CHAWRILAW BLUNDERS TO BEGIN WITH

Maj. Unawaitaw Blumbers to Begin with The last train from lowe had, reached Battleton Junction at 0 Bp. in., and the station girls were extra busy in consequence; when a tail, stern, brome-fined man, with closely cropped gray heir, and an iron gray mustache, strede up to the counter and demanded a cup of tea. Maj. Crawshaw had chosen his time wall, for young Todi was not present on the eccadion—the Todds dialog late on that particular evening, by some kitchen mischance which had been carefully prepared beforehand by more than one conspirator.

carefully propared beforehand by more than one compirator.

Maj Crawshaw had marched at once to that pertion of the counter ever which Miss lanked provided it from a hasty glanco ever the heads of a struggling mob his keen dyes had taken stock of Miss Racket—her tal, full figure, her round, rory checks and triday continual suffer, and he had dockled that this was the particular vicen who had upon the montal equilibrium of, his family, and fascinated his fool of a nephew. Just he sort of young worken to wind poor little Todd round her finger, he theight—pert, showy, saucy and far from unreserved in her demeanor. This was she, without a doubt.

Mus Racket drow him his cup of tea laturely and incitiferently, and after five stantorian applications for the boverage. So, to was in no hurry, if he were, and there was a young man to attend to who was going north, with a white har all on one side, and who had coup/imented her on, her appearance that evening, and repretiod that he did not live at liatileton, and would have happed ether compliments had fine allowed him, and Mod Crawshaw had not bewild persistently for ten over his left shoulder. The major drank slowly, and also a ham sandwich meanwhile, which he forget to pay for, until another of the young ledder romitted him of his error. This was Miss Daly, always as sharp as a needle in her considered in the control by admitrors would have allowed a quarter of hundred of Watlier's pee to except her notice with impunity. When their allowed a quarter of hundred of Watlier's pee to except her notice with impunity. When their allowed the different way with other traveling atoms, and there was posee, and only one man left at the counter, Maj Crawshaw began to attract the attention of Miss Rocket. We was not control to the residence of the same began to attract the attention of Miss Rocket. He was not seed and the work of the same began to attract the attention of Miss Rocket. He was not seed and the work of the same began to attract the attention of Miss Rocket. He was not seed and the same seed and the way with the same began to attract the attention of Miss Rocket. He was not seed and the same see ing open at her, but Miss Racket did not mission her rude question and thought within herself that he was only a middle aged back, and middle aged backs are de-surving at a little consideration when they are struck "ild of a heap" at first sight. There were many tales, true or false, in nuttory of incky "catchés" in this fashim, perhaps her time had come and this storn pouldenan was her fate. She wished she had not let him asks o many times for ten new and that he would not glara quite so flerrely at her, perhaps them was a "black" comewhere on her rose. The "blacks" came in very frequently through the open doors of the refreshment department.
